JOHNNY LAMBLEY'S CHANCE

Proctor Knott's Death-A Recent Sale or Two.

Pierre Lorillard yesterday succeeded in naking one of the scoops for which he is famous. He started in by playing Sirocco. The latter failed to win, but made a dead heat with May Win. In the fifth race, Mr. Loritiard's commissioners quietly went the rounds of the betting ring and put up hundreds wherever a bookmaker would take it on Daisy Woodruff. The mare was at 7 to 1, but the price quickly dropped to 4 to 1. Johnny Lambley rode Daisy and she won very easily. In the sixth race Krush, also owned by Mr. Lorillard, opened at 15 to 1 straight and 5 to 1 for a place. The Plunger bet heavily on Krush both ways. Lambley also had the mount on this animal, but was defeated by a very short head. Mr. Lorillard, however, landed the place money, and it was a snug sum. His winnings were very large and must have footed up in the thousands.

After the sixth race a messenger sought out Johnny Lambley and informed him that Mr. Lorillard desired to see him is the grand stand. Lambley went up in fear and frembiling. Usually when he loses a race for Father Bill Daly he gets a dressing down. He supposed that Mr. Lorillard was angry because Krush was beaten, and the boy prepared for a tongue-lashing.

Mr. Lorillard, on the contrary, compilmented the lad on his very fine riding and handed him two crisp $500 bills. Lambley was overwhelmed with surprise, and his tongue refused to utter the words of thanks that rose to his lips. He simply mumbled and rettred in confusion.

There were a score of people looking at this

There were a score of people looking at this scene and every one wished he was a lookey. They also wondered how it was that Taylor, who is the regular stable lookey, was not riding. Somes one ventured to question Mr. Lorillard on this point and he answered that Taylor's riding of late had been very poor and he was far from satisfied with him. He did not doubt the boy's honeaty, but he believes that ever since Belwood threw Taylor at Morris Park the latter has not been himself.

Lambley has an excellent chance now to redeem himself. Ever since he pulled Dixie and was ruled off at Guttenberg his mounts have been regarded with more or less suspicion, which, of course, was nothing more than natural. He is a good rider, and has no equal in getting the best of a start. He has a habit of constantly looking over his shoulder.
